I really enjoyed his TA sessions, where he went through critical technical points that the professor tends to skip during lectures. He is also highly efficient in handling questions and pointing students towards the right direction.

TA is exceptionally helpful for me to understand this phd level course since the topic he introduce in ta session could help us to understand the details that we are unable to notice in book.

703 provides very meticulous written solutions to every problem set and past exam, featuring the correct solution, common mistakes, and key takeaways. I walk away from everything I read for this course feeling like I am better prepared. This is unlike other courses where I am investing time to piece together a puzzle with lecture notes/TA notes/textbook/solutions to learn something. Potentially Zhangchi and Yusuke contribute to the written materials too (or maybe it's just Matt)but thanks to those who contribute to these materials!
